13) A Fly Fisherman's Dream, A Granger Bamboo Fly Rod

Jump at the opportunity to acquire The Granger Special bamboo fly rod, Model 9053 – no longer in production. This three-piece, two-tip cane classic was designed by Goodwin Granger with the great rivers of Colorado in mind. At 9' in length, weighing 5-3/4 ounces, this rod will cast up to a seven weight fly line with absolute authority, and will hold large lengths of line off the water when fishing from a drift boat.

Originally built at the Granger factory on Grant Street in Denver during the 1930's, this rod has been painstakingly restored to its original grandeur by master bamboo rod maker Peter Carboni of Boulder City, Nevada. Using period silks, and modern varnish, this magnificent example of Goodwin Granger's rod designing brilliance is ready for nearly another century of use. With its stunningly glowing golden silk wraps, this rod is beautiful enough to display with pride in a Great Room of a western mountain home. But this magnificent fishing tool is really crying out to be fished on a big Colorado River like the Gunnison. Unfished and unlined since its restoration, this rod will become a family heirloom to the winning bidder.
